Were rely on advertising to help fund our award-winning journalism. Instead of offering his publisher each book as he finished it, Bukowski simply sent all his work to Martin, who then selected the contents of the new volume. His various affairs and relationships provided material for his stories and poems. One critic has described Bukowski's fiction Charles Bukowski (Great Writers) a "detailed depiction of a certain taboo male fantasy: the uninhibited bachelor, slobby, anti-social, and utterly free", an image he tried to live up to with sometimes riotous public poetry readings and boorish party behavior. Bukowski was almost afraid to admit how much Fante directly influenced. The work was dull and the pay meager and once again he lasted just long enough to make some money for rent.
